RAYMOND N. FUENTES
VIA THE INTERNET

Hello!

Just wanted to write and send my suggestions for what the letters page should be called.

1. The POWER page
2. POWER Notes
3. Puffy Letters
4. SUGAR and SPICE
5. POWERPUFF PICKS
6. Townsville Tidbits
7. Letters from Pokey Oaks

Or you can also name it after the Mayor's favorite phrase, "POWERPUFF GIRLS, help!" Or better yet, how about naming it in honor of the best POWERPUFF GIRL, "The BUTTERCUP Page." Okay, thank! Bye.

Oh, my gosh! It's perfect! I can't believe we didn't think of that. SUGAR and SPICE, it just rolls off the tongue. Congratulations, Raymond, you have forever left your mark on the POWERPUFF GIRLS.

Dear Townsville News:

I just finished reading the "Remote Controlled" story in POWERPUFF GIRLS #7. I was happy Doctor Blowtop's Land of Happy Show was found out to be a fraud. Bubbles and the other children should have known better than to give money to Doctor Blowtop. I was happy Blossom and Buttercup were able to show Bubbles that Doctor Blowtop was really evil and manipulative. I hope the Mayor even learned his lesson about hypnotic television. I was happy the team came together and put an end to his charade of trickery.

Dear DC Comics:

Hi. I have sent you guys a couple of letters and pictures of the POWERPUFF GIRLS comic book. I hope you put one of my letters in the book. If you don't, I'll still have my Dad buy the comic book because I like it! The POWERPUFF GIRLS need a pet to play with and help fight crime, maybe a cat.

Why, the POWERPUFF GIRLS have had pets to play with and fight crime. In POWERPUFF GIRLS #1 there was Twitchy. Of course it turned out that he couldn't handle the pressures of fame and the super-hero life style — and that whole "swallowing" the Mayor thing didn't help, but we like to think about the good times.

Dear POWERPUFF GIRLS:

Since I was 10 (right now I am 11 years old) I heard about you. I started to read your comics. I thought they were interesting and funny. So far I barely have 3 comics (which is really wack because I don't have a lot of your comic books). I like each and every one of you POWERPUFF GIRLS. The thing is that I wish I had Cartoon Network to see you girls on TV. My parents can't afford that much money for cable. Hope you girls write back to me to give me advice or something, okay? Hope my letter gets printed in the comic book of yours. But if it is, I wouldn't know which one. Well, gotta go.

Along with the monthly POWERPUFF GIRLS comic there are three other monthly Cartoon Network comics: SCOOBY-DOO, DEXTER'S LABORATORY, and the all-new CARTOON CARTOONS. There are also tons of other POWERPUFF GIRLS merchandise like magazines, books, toys and videos of fabulous POWERPUFF GIRLS' adventures.

Dear DC Comics:

Hi! My son and I enjoy the POWERPUFF GIRLS comic very much! Here is a drawing by my son that you may be able to use in the comic's letters page. Keep up the good work.

Other DC Kids' Titles:

Dexter's Laboratory #19:

How's a kid to keep soup from dribbling down his shirt? If you're Dexter, you create a super-sponge spoon — and get yourself in a world of trouble when Dee-Dee swipes it!

Looney Tunes #74: March is Weird Science Month as Marvin sets his snooze alarm to blow up the Earth. Bugs tries to escape the Mad Scientist's clutches, and Claude Cat becomes a lab rat!

Cartoon Cartoons #1: Meet Courage the Cowardly Dog and his eccentric owners, in their faraway farmhouse that's a magnet for spooky visitors — including the giant nose that just fell from the sky. Plus Ed, Edd n Eddy, the jawbreaker-loving trio of troublemaking kids, need one more board for the world's greatest treehouse — but neighborhood weirdo Johnny 2x4 won't part with his beloved Plank!

Scooby-Doo #44: Scooby and the gang set stars when a one-eyed alien stalks a planetarium, and they plunge into the Pine Barrens of New Jersey to hunt a legendary devil!

This issue's cover by Phil Moy.

next issue:

A blizzard closes Pokey Oaks Kindergarten, and the Girls get a day off — but they're too snowed under by crime-fighting to have fun. It'll take an Abominable Snowman to chill them out! Written by Abby Denson; art by Ricardo Garcia Fuentes and Mike DeCarlo; cover by Phil Moy.
